Item of interest: MacKinlay Kantor this won a great honor— the Pulitzer Prize for his historical work, Andersonville. I have not read this book on the much discussed Confederate prison camp of the War Between the States, but we were within a short of the locale of the story in Georgia not long ago and had planned to visit Andersonville, but a terrific storm came up and we headed on to Atlanta. But the item of interest is that some years ago, MacKinlay Kantor was a visitor in the Times-Virginian office. I recall the occasion well. He was browsing around the country looking for likely material for stories. He gathered some material here, and then moved on to Tennessee, according to what he told us of his plans.

NEED OF TEACHERS CITED FOR VIRGINIA SCHOOLS

"725,000 children are in Virginia public schools now. By 1965, we can expect 1,000,000 or more. We need 3,500 new teachers a year!" This number, explains Mrs. Louise Gallehher, Chairman of the State Board of Education Committee for Teacher Recruitment, is required to meet the demand for replacements and growing enrollments; to reduce oversize classes, and eliminate half-day sessions; and to relieve the number untrained persons now holding teaching positions.

Of the anticipated college graduates in Virginia in June 1956, authorities estimate only 1,072 (white) will become teachers. To narrow this gap between the 3,500 needed each year is the challenge facing teacher recruitment.

Representatives of twenty - three state-wide organizations constitute the membership of the Virginia Committee for Teacher Recruitment, formed in March 1956. Local committees have been appointed in twenty-four counties and cities.

Excess Wheat Deadline Set

Appomattox County wheat producers are reminded that the date by which excess wheat shall be utilized is June 1, 1956. W. D. Hix, III, the county ASC chairman, states that acreage in excess of the larger of the farm allotment or 15 acres which is not utilized for green manure, pasture, hay, or silage, will be subject to a penalty. The penalty rate for the 1956 crop is $1.07 per bushel, which is 45 per cent of the parity price of wheat as of May 1, 1956.

The ASC chairman cautioned all wheat farmers in the county who have excess wheat, whether intentionally seeded or otherwise, to make a memorandum of the June 1 date of utilization. There are no provisions under the 1956 wheat marketing quota program for granting an extension of that date.

Farmers who plant wheat and other grain for mixture are also reminded that such mixtures must be less than 50 per cent by weight of wheat when seeded, as well as when harvested, to qualify as a wheat mixture under the definition of the marketing quota program. The responsibility of a wheat mixture turning out to be less than 50 per cent wheat by weight when harvested is entirely upon the wheat farmer.

Any acreages which do not qualify under the definition of a wheat mixture and which acreages are in excess of the farm allotment and 15 acres will be subject to marketing quota penalties on the production therefrom.

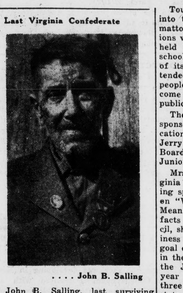
Last Virginia Confederate



. . . . John B. Salling

John B. Salling, last surviving Confederate in Virginia and one of only three survivors, celebrated his 110th birthday May 15, at his home at Ft. Blackmore, in Southwest Virginia. The aged veteran put on his Confederate uniform for the occasion and seemed in fine spirit and health. Included in gifts received on his 110th birthday was a Confederate shirt from Governor Stanley, and a 10-gallon hat from the Texas Rangers. Salling claims his jet black hair at 110 is due to always wearing a hat and never brushing his hair, so the 10-gallon Texas hat was a welcomed gift and he wore it all day.

Only one Union veteran survives.

Tourist trade could be developed into the biggest business in Appomattox County, according to opinions voiced at a Tourist Trade Clinic held last night at the local high school cafeteria. The clinic, first of its kind ever held here, was attended by Appomattox business people who have the opportunity to come in contact with the traveling public.

The Tourist Trade Clinic was sponsored by the Distributive Education Service at A. H. S., of which Jerry Miller is director; the School Board, the Times-Virginian and the Junior Chamber of Commerce.

Mrs. Julian Gilkeson, of the Virginia Travel Council was the opening speaker at the clinic. She spoke on "What the Tourist Industry Can Mean to Our Community." Citing facts gathered by the Travel Council, she declared that the travel business in Virginia is headed toward a goal of a billion dollars a year spent in the Old Dominion. She pointed to the Jamestown Festival of next year as an event that will bring three million extra tourists to the state, and that local communities in Virginia have an opportunity to tie in with this celebration of the 350th anniversary of Jamestown.

Jerry Miller, D. E. Co-ordinator, then spoke on "Courtesy to the Tourist." He presented charts and drawings to illustrate the value of extending every courtesy to the visitor in our midst. "You use only 14 muscles when you smile, but over 60 when you frown," he declared.

A briefing on "Appomattox's No. 1 Tourist Attraction," was given by H. A. Gurney, Superintendent of the Appomattox Court House National Historical Park. He listed the typical questions that are asked by visitors from out-of-state, and suggested the answers to these questions. The idea was to brief local people on what to pass on in the way of information to the tourist. A number of questions from the audience brought out additional facts that tourists wanted to know.

Trooper Paul Hollingsworth, Virginia State Police, gave an informative talk on "Road Transportation and Information."

Concluding the Clinic, was a summary by Calvin Robinson, editor of the Times-Virginian, on "The Brass Tacks of Doing Business With the Tourist." He declared that the $12 per person per day spent by the average tourist was worth going all-out for, and expressed the belief that Appomattox had a veritable gold mine at the Old Court House, and should try to get tourists to stop and spend more time here.

At the conclusion of the Clinic the group agreed that there should be an annual briefing of this type, and that plans should be made for a more elaborate Tourist Trade Clinic next spring.

Altalfa Growers Fear Weevil

Many alfalfa growers are now experiencing mild to heavy damage to their crop by the alfalfa weevil. Many of these will not be able to spray the first cutting because of unavailability of custom spraying service or similiar sprayers found on the farm.

Many growers are asking what is the best thing to do under these circumstances. From the Entomological standpoint, it would be better to let the alfalfa weevil larvae ecntinue to feed to full growth on the first cutting, cutting the crop at the normal time or a little later then normal. This will permit the larvae to complete its development on the first crop. Since there is only one larvae generation of alfalfa weevil the second and succeeding cuttings of crop will not be affected by the insect.

Some farmers have, or will harvest, their first cutting unsprayed before the alfalfa larvae has reached full growth. This will of course mean that active larvae will be present to feed on new growth of the second crop. Unless these larvae are controlled there may not be a second cutting. In cases like these it will be necessary to treat the stubble after the first hay crop is removed from the field. This treatment may or may not destroy all of the still active larvae and a second spraying may be necessary when the growth has reached one or two inches in height.

Subscription rate: $2.00 a year; payable in advance.
